

Media release

CyberGuru helping businesses and not-for-profit organisations upgrade from outdated Microsoft software

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Zillmere, Friday 10 January 2014

Is your business or not-for-profit organisation still running outdated Microsoft software? In less than three months' time, Microsoft will end extended support for Windows XP and Office 2003. This means that computers still running this software will be unable to be supported by security updates and potentially leave your computers vulnerable to hackers, malicious software and other intrusions.

Microsoft determines lifecycles for each of its products, which commences when a particular product is released and ends when it is no longer supported or sold. In accordance with its lifecycle, Windows XP's date for end of extended support is on 8 April 2014.

Chris Jeffery, Proprietor/Chief Guru of CyberGuru notes, "Windows XP and Office 2003 has been a reliable and stable operating system for many businesses and not-for-profit organisations for over ten years, however the time has come for its successors, Windows 7 and 8, and Office 2010 and Office 2013 to take its place. Through our computer solutions, we have helped businesses and not-for-profit organisations upgrade their computers and software and train their employees. We'll provide peace of mind that your computer environment will be up-to-date and supported with the latest operating system and software".

If your business or not-for-profit organisation is still running Windows XP or Office 2003 or if know of one who is, CyberGuru is on a mission to help them upgrade. For a limited time, CyberGuru will offer businesses and not-for-profit organisations a free one hour consultation to discuss, answer any questions and a special offer to review and ascertain their environment to prepare for an upgrade to the latest versions.

CyberGuru, based in Brisbane's northern suburb of Zillmere, provides award-winning, professional and affordable computer solutions to small businesses, not-for-profit organisations and individuals in the areas of consulting, design, support and training.

To make contact with CyberGuru or for more information on the offer, please visit www.cyberguru.com.au.

For interviews and other information, please contact:

Chris Jeffery

Proprietor/Chief Guru

CyberGuru

Phone: 0488 80 GURU (4878)

Email: cyberguru@cyberguru.com.au

###

Winner: Australian Computer Society Queensland Young ICT Professional of the Year 2012

